I vs. Me - grammar

Both words are pronouns, but I is a subject pronoun while me is an object pronoun. So, in the sentence, "She and I went to the store," the correct word to use would be I rather than me. Why? Because I is the subject of the sentence. (Who is going to the store? She and I are going to the store.)

I vs. Me (Review) - Grammar and Punctuation

Me Follows Prepositions and Action Verbs. The third sentence is right because called is an action verb, and "Harry and me" are its direct objects: they are the ones who were called. If we remove "Harry and," we can easily hear that "She called me on Saturday" sounds correct, whereas "She called I on Saturday" obviously sounds wrong.
