John Sandford's 'The Night Crew' Anna Batory runs the night crew. Small, dark-haired, shy but tough, a Wisconsin farm girl on the streets of Los Angeles, she roams the city with her small band of video free-lancers in their truck from ten to dawn, looking for news: accidents, robberies, murders, demonstrations — anything they can shoot and sell to the local stations or the networks.

John Sandford - The Night Crew

Some may not like this novel since Davenport, Flowers or Kidd is in it, but trust me this is a great standalone novel. It starts out a little slow but builds into a great thriller as only John Sanford can write. It revolves around an independent film crew that goes around at night getting film of news events to sell to television stations.
