~~J. G. Farrell - Wikipedia~~

Troubles is a 1970 novel by J. G. Farrell. The plot concerns the dilapidation of a once grand Irish hotel (the Majestic), in the midst of the political upheaval during the Irish War of Independence (1919-1921). It is the first instalment in Farrell's acclaimed 'Empire Trilogy', preceding The Siege of Krishnapur and The Singapore Grip.

The Majestic is the British Empire, circa 1920. Life bumps along. From time to time there is yet another flare-up of the Troubles, with its irrationality and violence. For the Protestant Anglo-Irish and the Majestic, the course of the novel is a downward spiral. On the whole, it is a melancholic novel.

Troubles. Major Brendan Archer returns from the Great War to claim his fiancée, whose family owns the Majestic Hotel in Kilnalough, Ireland. She is strangely altered, however, along with the hotel, which is in spectacular decline — cats roam its upper stories, the Palm Court is a jungle, and the last guests are little old ladies...

Troubles is the first novel in the Anglo-Irish writer JG Farrell's Empire Trilogy: three tangentially connected works that highlight different facets of British colonialism. Farrell died young, as he drowned at the age of 44, but this 1970 book got some semi-recent attention when it won the Lost Man Booker Prize in 2010, which was established to retroactively honor a book that missed out on being eligible for the Booker due to a rule change that year.
